RUSSIAN POLICY: SAGHALIEN

(Japan Herald, Oct 8.)
Within the Island of Saghalien boundary of Russian rule and Japan's possession has long been a matter of dubious dispute; not very readily determinable because neither of the disputants has unquestionably performed those acts of discovery or of settlement which are necessary to the acquisition of sovereignty over unoccupied territory, nor have the parties been satisfactorily established in their

under the law of nations, rising out of contiguity, or by prescription, to the portions of the Island which they respectively assert a right to occupy, and to hold not only against each other, but as against other nations also. It is not so long since an embassy was sent to St. Petersburg to remonstrate against the alleged encroachments of that Power, and to arrive, if such ere possible, at a definite settlement of the question, but without effect, both sides being equally tenacious, and equally incapable of justifying their relative pretensions. The Japanese embassy therefore returned, without taking much by the notion. Russia, meantime, not merely given up nothing, but from what is known is displaying such an amount

Two months ago, it was announced in the English newspapers, that the Russian Government had avowed its intention to transport a large number of criminals detained in Siberia, and that an expeditious vessel had already been sent out to make the arrangements for their reception. By a letter from Hakodate, published by a contemporary, it would seem that at part of the Island is of course less rigorous than farther north, therefore ter adapted for the formation of convict settlement: but, as Russia in h settlements as her first step in colonization and as she has not had permission of the ness to occupy this part of the Island close proximity to Yesso, but has done so in defiance of Japanese claims to territoriality, it is manifest that it is her intention to assert supremacy over Saghalien entirely.

Descending from the frozen North, Russia, availing herself of the decay and disintegration of the Chinese empire has long been crossed the Amoor, and stealthily by mile, occupied with her military and naval posts the extreme eastern frontier of Manchuria, skirting many hundreds of miles the sea of Japan, down to the borders of the Korean peninsula. The vastness of her empire has at present paused. Her career of conquest has, (saving some feeble protests the Peking Government,) been hitherto unchecked. She has of late years carved out of the Chinese continent a far larger territory than the territory of Alaska, recently proposed to America, and at a very trifling cost in men and money. The Corea is almost within her grasp; in a few years she would her military and naval strength be such augmented in this quarter of the globe, and the great Powers neglect to force the Koreans into a treaty, that also will be a request be annexed to her dominions from the eastern shores of the Yellow Sea may hereafter be destined to annex

In Central Asia Russia aggrandizes her stimulated by that lust of covetousness which is characteristic of her policy, b people lying betwixt her former frontiers and our Indian possessions. But it is well be doubted whether this exercise of power on the part of Russia over the ignorant and brutal hordes of the greater European continent should be a subject for either apprehension or regret. Little though we may admire Russian rule, we deem it infinitely preferable to the barbarian despotism which in many cases it supersedes. To govern the nomadic races of Northern Asia may perhaps in the long run prove comparatively little gain to the Czar, but be service. Latterly the very recent ent of the Russians upon the extremity the Island, far southward of latitude 50° the Japanese are anxious that they ould be restricted to, as their limit in direction, has once more aroused the Business Authorities to take action. ferences have been held with the ish Minister, who has sent informato the Imperial Government, and endeavoured, but without much sucto enlist the opposition of his col-nes to this alleged usurpation. Beyond communicating to their respective governments the knowledge of what is being done, the complaints of the Japanese Authorities, no other step is likely, we should think, to be taken by the Foreign Representatives. The Treaty Powers have distinctly declined to guarantee the integrity of the Japanese Empire. So long as treaty rights are in no wise invaded, it is extremely questionable, however susceptible the mutual jealousy of the great Powers may be, whether the occupation of a portion of Japanese territory would lead to any serious remonstrances on the of the others. Her policy of isolation still steadily pursued by Japan, and her obstinate adherence to the closure of the country to foreigners, excepting permitting access to ports, opened and kept open by the use of such armaments as intimidate others into compliance, deprives her of any right under aggression. In fact, civilization, so far as she is concerned, recognizes whatever it obliges Russia to respect her territory, but rather the reverse. At present, the country is govern-such ignorant and bigotted principles that exists for itself alone. Most of her harbours are closed to commerce, and her ports are absolutely so, to foreign capital enterprise. Foreigners are prohibited from travelling, and equally so from settling in the open ports. And even with therefore look to the Foreign Minister to make the Japanese Government understand plainly that until it alters its policy so as to be in accord with modern ideas throughout the world, it will not be so successful in its efforts to win the friendship of Russia. It is because they love Russia more, but Japan less. All this may be very disagreeable to Sir Harry Parkes, who appears incapable of comprehending the baneful influence of Japanese exclusiveness, since his career as Minister has been distinguished by his effort on his part to bring it to an end, but however assiduous he may be in furtherance of the Japanese wishes, he will probably find on this subject, on the part of our other Ministers, little support as he meets with, for his policy generally, from the public at large.

SOME minstrels recently started out on a tour, and advertised in a town to give a performance "for the benefit of the poor," the ticket reduced to sixpence." The hall was jammed and next morning a committee of the poor called upon the treasurer of the concert for the amount the said benefit had netted. The treasurer asked as to the settlement at the demand. "I thought," he said to the chairman of the committee, "you advertised this concert for the benefit of the poor or?" "Well," replied the treasurer, "we reduce the tickets to sixpence so that the poor could all come."

completely bear him out in his assertion (letter to the London Daily News, dated 14th July), that Mr Burlingame's letters accredited him "to the Western Governments as an honorary statesman." The passages bearing on this matter have already been published in the China Mail, but they are well worth reproduction in connection with Mr Robertson's present letter.

In Mr McLeary Brown's (the official) translation, the following occurs:—

"In virtue of the commission we have with reverence received from Heaven, and as China and foreign nations are members of one family, we are cordially desirous of placing on a firm and lasting basis the relations of friendship and good understanding now existing between us and the nations at amity with China."

The other translation interprets the

"This was in 1863, and if this single fact that the Chinese believe themselves the only civilized people in the world, and themselves and all other foreigners as barbarians, could be fairly brought home to the British and American people, it would produce a revolution in the views entertained of China."

she has at present paused. Her career of acquisition has, (saving some feeble protests from the Peking Government,) been hitherto unchecked. She has of late years carved out of the Chinese continent a far larger slice of its territory of Alaska, recently disposed of at a very favorable cost too of men and money. She is almost within her grasp in a few years should her military and naval strength be much augmented in this quarter of the globe, and the great Powers neglect to force the Koreans into a treaty, that also will be conquest be annexed to her dominions. From the eastern shores of the Yellow Sea she may hereafter be destined to menace alike the foreign trade of the Empires of China and Japan. In Central Asia, Russia aggrazes herself, stimulated by that display of such armaments as intimidate the rulers into compliance, deprives her of any sympathy under aggression. In fact, civilized nations, so far as she is concerned, have no reason whatever to oblige Rus-

opposite. At present, the country is governed on such ignorant and bigotted principles that it exists for itself alone. Most of her neighbourhoods are closed to commerce, and her interior absolutely so, to foreign capital and enterprise. Foreigners are prohibited from travelling, and equally so from settling beyond the open ports. And even with
